

Daily Blog

Category: Breaking News

Published: Tuesday, 06 May 2008 05:10

It's National Teacher Day

Class Project by Students of "quiltedgentleman"

Today is National Teacher Day in the United States. It is a day when those individuals who spend so much time and effort are recognized for their hard work. This quilt is a class project by the students in quiltedgentleman's 1st grade as a donation for Relay for Life. Each of the hands represents a student in the class. What a creative way to include quilting, donation and art into a project. This class is sure to learn a great deal by their combined efforts.

Each of us has had a teacher that left a lasting impression. What tip or advice have you received from an instructor that has helped you with quilting? If you are a teacher, what advice would you give to your students?