Let's Get Organized - Week 17 - Markers, Pens & Pencils

Markers, pens and colored pencils are another way of adding interest to your quilts and sewing projects. Elegantly displayed at all shows and craft shops, these pencils of writing color can make even the most drab walled individual (doll) with excitement. These lines are often collected randomly in mugs, plastic bags or laying on your work table. This nation is clutter. Pens, which are prone to dryness by rolling off tables and pens and markers dry out when not stored properly. Then, finding what you want is a huge frustrating task as you sort through all the mugs and bags.

So gather up all of your markers, pens and pencils and lets get organized to keep them all ready to be used when you need them.

Color Your World recommends these tips for keeping your items at their best shape:

1. Store dual-ended markers and pens horizontally. If you store markers, like Prismacolor and Tombows on their ends, the ink will settle at one tip and the other may dry out. Storing these flat will make the pen or marker last longer because the ink in the barrel is less likely to dry out in general.

2. Store single-ended markers and pens vertically with the capped tip facing down. This way the ink stays at the nib and is ready to go when you need it—no drying or chattering.

3. Organize your colored pencils by grouping them in a marker box. This keeps all the tips of the pencils from rolling off your work surface. You won't have to keep digging through your whole collection for the same color over and over. Some manufacturers say that you can leave them uncapped for up to 24 hours and the tips won't dry out. This may be the case, but the ink will keep evaporating from the pen—such a waste. Keep 'em capped.

4. Keep colored pencils stored away from direct light or heat. It can be a nasty surprise to have a pencil lay down a glop of color when you wanted to use a light hand.

5. Organize large collections in groups of similar colors. To make this easier, have one section of your storage for color groupings based on the basic Color Wheel. You will have an easier time finding just the color you need.

6. Keep your markers and pens lightly capped. Some manufacturers say that you can leave them uncapped for up to 24 hours and the tips won't dry out. This may be the case, but the ink will keep evaporating from the pen—such a waste. Keep 'em capped.

Now it's on to the fun ideas we found. Once again, we offer ideas for two types of creative spaces.

Options for Clean and Clutter Free

If you prefer a clean and clutter free space, consider these options for storing your embellishment items. Each offers a clean at hand, organized solution without being a visual distraction.

1. Tran Delux offers pencil cases that hold assorted numbers of pencils. (Photo by Gregory Case Photography)

2. LoveMeSew shares a tutorial for making your own pencil case. (article no longer available)

3. StuffnThingz created a dedicated storage box for her markers.

Options for Visual Inspiration and Admiration

Do you prefer a visually inspiring space, or love having your collections of pens, pencils and markers out in the open and easily accessible? The following ideas might just be the perfect solution.

1. Pen Case Strip: Use pen cases to hold assorted numbers of pencils.

2. Lovelife makes a tutorial for making your own pencil case. (article no longer available)

3. Beach mom created a dedicated storage box for her markers.
1. Tangii at TheInkingSpot used ordinary household drain spout material in PVC form cut into 5 1/2" lengths and glued together with contact cement. A bit of spray paint in your choosing is the perfect finish to this project.

2. DIYCrafts shares another idea using PVC pipes.

4. Look for heavy plastic cups that can be hung on a peg board to organize your pens. Just drill a hole in the back and use an "S" hook to hang on the peg board.

5. PencilPets shares a clever way to make a lazy susan style pencil holder.